MARS ALIVE!

Daniel Ross, who wrote UFOs and the Complete Evidence From Space, has recently brought out a new website about Mars. This includes a transcript of a talk he recently gave in Japan, and I am reprinting this in its entirety here, with his permission. This gives lots of evidence for a living Mars, and this is supported by evidence from another website showing that chlorophyll was detected by the 1997 Pathfinder spacecraft. As for the canals on Mars, long relegated to the bin of "psychological joining effects of points", Daniel has shown that the Mars expedition of Dr. Slipher at the Lamont Hussey Observatory, South Africa in 1954 recorded numerous examples of the lines, and they have been seen even in post-probe times, as Arthur C Clarke describes in his Mysterious World, although the astronomers concerned did not believe what they were seeing as they "knew" there are no canals on Mars! We also have an account from the 1967 opposition of Mars of seeing the canals, from a Junior Astronomical Society newsletter. This was two months before the sighting near Guildford that produced a scatter of rocks that seemed rather Mars-coloured, one of which had a pattern in the top very similar to a picture received from the Mariner 4 space probe two years before.

Our Space Visitors Today - And The Mars Connection
by Daniel Ross

Lecture Given in Tokyo, October of 1998

I am very happy to visit Japan again, and to be here at this GAP Assembly. And I hope to provide the audience with some informative material that relates to today's questions about Mars. In the United States, this is not an easy subject to get across to people, for many reasons, and perhaps the same is true in Japan, because NASA's descriptions about the Martian planet seem so clearcut and definitive to most people.

Ever since I was a young student, I always have had a great inclination to science, because it relates to the true nature of things in the world and in the universe. As you know, I went on to be a reactor operator on nuclear submarines, and studied the sciences in many fields following that. It would be easy to give a lecture here today on nuclear physics, electronics, or any aspect of space sciences, but that's not what you or I are here for. What is difficult to lecture on, are the reasons why NASA's photographic images and its statements about the Martian planetary environment are in direct opposition to what George Adamski and his Space Contacts told us about Mars. I don't really like to lecture about untruths, I would much rather share, as best I can, the cosmic truths about the Space People and their life on other planets, and the uplifting philosophy they bring.

But today we can't share the truth about Mars, (or Venus), with rationally thinking people, without really confronting the untruths told to the public by the authorities about those planets. In the States for example, initially many people are incredulous to hear that I would even think there are people living on Mars, let alone write a book supporting that position, since it flies in the face of what NASA and the scientific authorities have publicized for 20 years since the Viking missions, and now Pathfinder. So even if they accept that UFOs are visiting Earth, they say that the spaceships must be from somewhere else, and not Mars by any chance. I think Adamski had it a little easier in this case, 30 years ago. Back then, the general ideas about Mars were still only theories, but today they are supposedly "proven facts".

So I would like to begin today, by putting the focus on Perception. For example, I have thought back to my previous trips to your country, and figured out that I have been in Japan now 37 days. My wife Pam and I have had the opportunity to see and enjoy many things here, and especially in making contact with the many GAP members. This is the fourth conference, and beyond that, the rest of my time and activities here have really been like vacation time. So my actual perception of Japan is not realistic when compared to another person's perception - a person who lives and works his whole life here, and who fully speaks the language. He knows a million more things than I do about living in Japan.

It is the same for you; even though you may have taken some nice trips to the States in the past, your perception of living in the States is no doubt somewhat different from the actual reality of living there. You may perceive that there is unbounded opportunity and economic plenty for everyone, but for millions in America, life and its demands are very difficult. And in many areas, many things in society need to be improved, because there is a great imbalance in wealth. Our education system has been in serious decline too.

So perceptions will be relative to experience, and also relative to another source - what one has been taught. Now take all the students for the last 20 or 30 years. They were all taught the same thing about Mars. And those in regular science and engineering positions for the planetary projects, their perceptions are based on the same false knowledge and assumptions that everyone, including the public, has been given. And there is no way that perceptions based on false sources can lead to a determination of real truth. It is not possible. One will be living with illusions and limited understanding, until his perceptions and thoughts are brought into awareness by a true source.

I knew that the information released with last year's Pathfinder mission would be exactly the same as they released with the Viking missions 20 years earlier. The first reason is that it is not possible for the project scientists to expand their perceptions, until they are acting from the basis of true information. And secondly, the highest level at the space agency, which is under direct control by secret intelligence departments of the government, heavily censors the real probe findings, and relays very tainted data to the consoles of the lower level project scientists. Planetary photos, from orbit and from the surface, are carefully scrutinized and screened, and when not withheld, are released with definite control of the imaging. And the standard unchanging image of Mars gets publicized once again.

The intelligence agencies have known for years, the real environment on Mars. They know of its being inhabited, and the UFO evidence related to Mars.

They have been censoring the real knowledge about Mars since the 1950s. I have explained all that in my book, along with the deliberate coverup about the Moon and Venus. What is the biggest reason for this coverup?

Consider for a moment, all the oil and petroleum products consumed every day. The millions and millions of cars (California alone has 20 million), and you have to consider every state and country; trucks, buses, trains, oceangoing ships, planes, jets, small aircraft; military aircraft and transport vehicles, rockets, and the list goes on and on. And then you have to consider industrial power, home heating, electricity, etc. Billions of barrels of oil per day. And then we must consider the vast nuclear industry and its expanding development. Those who control the energy sources on this planet are the most powerful forces in this world, along with those corporations that profit from military buildup. And that is why the public will not be told the truth about the planets. A government agency is not going to entirely change the course of world affairs by showing Mars as a living, habitable planet, that in turn would immediately lead to the acknowledgement of their interplanetary spacecraft, and the free energy propulsion of those ships.

So perceptions will be kept very limited and misdirected, as long as the natural free energy power of these ships poses such a threat to our systems of energy, and must be kept secret. Official statements are expected to stay the same. So within the informational medium we find ourselves in today, you, I, any individual one cannot know the truth about the planetary environments without knowing the truth about the UFOs. It is not possible! And I am talking about Knowing. Not just believing. Some people will believe anything you tell them. Or what the authorities tell them. And some will not believe anything that might be told to them. So simply believing, usually means choosing whatever set of ideas they feel most comfortable with. To get to real knowledge of something takes study and learning; the sincere seeker will get past the mental limitations, and his perception will expand to recognize the real truth of that which he is seeking. And he will be able to comprehend it.

With reference to the space field, and as part of the search for the truth, it is important to learn what noted astronomers and scientists determined about the near planets prior to the 1960's. Only then can one see the clear contrast to what NASA promoted about Venus, Mars, and the Moon in the 60's and 70's, while at the same time the government was officially discrediting the UFO evidence. I won't be talking on this today - I covered all that in detail in my book, and chronologically in order for each of the planets. It was based on more than 10 years of research, and I had worked very hard to insure all the evidence was accurate. I wanted it to be 100% correct, with no mistakes. And that was quite a task since there had been so much official coverup going on with space exploration. And in 11 years since publication, only one person has found one small error in the book, and it turns out that the error occurred because the NASA document I had obtained had a defect in its publication. Because I listed and noted all my sources, he was able to check through another copy of the same document. I will show you the minor correction in the slide program.

Adamski did describe environmental conditions on Mars, saying the planet was rugged, quite commercial and industrial, and very similar to Earth. Water is channelled from the polar caps and melting ice areas, and there are other canals of salt water which ships use to navigate to inland cities. In this description, he also added that Mars has a population explosion. He mentioned in a lecture in 1963, that Mars had 6 hundred million people. We can only guess if it has increased much since then, but it would still have a significantly lesser population than the Earth has. Adamski also stated, that as a civilization we tend to follow Mars in development, while they progress to become like the advanced society shown on Venus.

The two little satellites of Mars are quite an anomaly. The larger one, Phobos, is 24 kilometers across, and circles Mars every 7.6 hours (a little more than 3 times a day) at an altitude of 6000 km. It orbits Mars faster than the planet turns on its axis, and this could not happen naturally. And it is the only satellite in the solar system that orbits its parent planet faster than the planet rotates. The other satellite, Deimos, circles Mars every 1.3 days at an altitude of 24,000 km. It is about half the size of Phobos. They have almost perfectly circular orbits. In 1959 a Soviet scientist, Dr. I. S. Shklovsky, using calculations done by the U.S. Naval Observatory, found that Phobos "was being slowed by electromagnetic drag and tidal friction more than was possible with an actual solid moon." (reference: "Aliens From Space" by Donald Keyhoe, 1973). Therefore, he proposed that the satellite must be hollow, and that if it was hollow it must have an artificial origin. His information impressed many top scientists, and in 1963 a high NASA official made a statement at the Institute of Aerospace Sciences, that the moon Phobos "might actually be a colossal space base orbiting Mars."

At a lecture in New York in 1965, Adamski was asked about the moons around Mars. You may have read this from the series in UFO Contactee from Alice Pomeroy's "For An Example" Adamski answered: " They are artificial platforms, space platforms, those two (satellites) that they are talking about. And... they can be sent out, as far as meeting us, halfway between themselves and us. They can be used for all purposes. They are defense platforms. This is why Captain Ruppelt, when he came up to see me (at Palomar), while he was still connected with the (Air Force) Blue Book Project, asked me: " George, what is going to happen when we go out to Mars?" (Because Mars had been in the mind of the military for a long time. And it was mostly Mars that was always favored (in the military's thinking) as being inhabited."

"I told him, if we go there with a noble thought, with noble intentions, we'll be admitted with open arms. But if we go there to disturb them, or cause trouble of any kind, in a hostile manner, we'll not even get there. He said, " I go along with you on that."

" So he (Ruppelt) already knew that. These are artificial space platforms, and they are BIG ones! They can accomodate in the neighborhood of thirty thousand people, with equipment and everything of a battle nature. They're not small ones. We intend to build the same thing." (end quote)

George Adamski had made a curious statement a couple years prior. He said that about 80% of the people on Mars don't want us coming their way, because of Earth people's mental attitudes and aggressive behavior. Since we have shown that we are unfit to govern our own planet environmentally, or live peacefully amongst ourselves, the majority of people on Mars don't want us to show up there. Let's understand, that when we have differences between nations, or even between political groups within countries, we often resort to fighting and killing. Those recent bombings at U.S. embassies in Africa had more than 100 innocent people killed. A number of countries, and the leader in this is the U.S., stand behind nuclear weapons to back up their threats. India and Pakistan, longtime enemies, each exploded nuclear bombs this past May, to arrogantly show to the other that they now have nuclear weapons.

Mars knows, that if we soon succeed in building a spacecraft that can carry humans for interplanetary travel, their planet is our first target. So they do not want to see us get out into space until we have truly learned to live peacefully on Earth, and work for the common good of all our inhabitants. As it is right now, they could have sabotaged one or more of the recent probes launched by the U.S. and Russia in the past few years, so that our authorities don't find out all they want to know about Mars. In other words, the Martians probably don't want us snooping around too closely with our advanced probes. For example, NASA launched a Mars Observer Mission in 1993, built at the astounding cost of $850 million (NASA must have built something really superior to cost that much), and everything was going right during its spaceflight to Mars, when signals suddenly stopped. In an instant the satellite was lost, like it had been plucked right out of space. NASA had no explanation. Another example - Russia launched their MARS 96 spacecraft, which was an advanced probe, but the fourth stage booster failed to ignite, and the spacecraft fell back into the Earth's atmosphere in a ball of fire. What makes this a mysterious incident, is that the probe's power supply contained 4 small batteries containing 200 grams of plutonium 238. Plutonium is known as being the most toxic nuclear substance to man, and even half a gram of PU238 could kill thousands of people if accidentally released into the environment, either by airborne contamination or through contaminated ground water. It's the stuff we make nuclear bombs with. Well, maybe the Martians didn't want that probe with plutonium batteries out in space, or reaching their planet, and so caused the MARS96 spacecraft to drop right back down to Earth. Understand, plutonium doesn't exist in Nature. This deadly radioactive element is created within our nuclear power reactors.

Let's go back to Phobos and Deimos. Viking images released in 1977 showed them looking like asteroid bodies. I believe that one of two scenarios occurred. Either NASA deliberately released fake pictures to dispel the earlier speculations about them being artificial satellites, or, the Martians deliberately tricked the probe's electronics, to prevent the probe from showing the the true identifying images of the satellites. I don't doubt that Adamski knew exactly what he was talking about regarding those enigmatic Martian satellites.

MORE EVIDENCE FOR LIFE ON MARS

AMES RESEARCH CENTRE - Evidence is leaking out that Mars is a more hospitable planet than previously accepted by planetary scientists. As our perception of the "Red Planet" evolves, new data is giving us glimpses of possible life. Each year the Martian ice melts at the poles creating conditions for unique types of vegetation to flourish. There are images of what appears to be dense "foliage", that looks similar to bushes with some height based on the shadows they produce. New images indicate liquid subsurface water exists particularly in the Southern Hemisphere. Strong sunlight warms the planet enough to allow hardy plants or possibly green moulds to survive. A team of researchers studying photographs of Mars has found teardrop features that they say were sculpted by flowing water and other studies hinted that subsurface reservoirs may exist. Some scientists conclude geothermal activity indicates that there is enough water to sustain life on Mars. Also the Mars Odyssey Satellite is now picking up hydrogen in the surface of the Martian southern hemisphere indicating water, which is crucial to life. Odyssey will orbit Mars for 917 days of science mapping. As told in these files for years, scientists now expect there are vast, hidden stores of water below the dry, dusty surface. Many images taken in spring time show chlorophyll type growth on the planet. The chlorophyll molecules are used by plants to produce energy from sunlight. A close-up of July 1997 photographs of rocks shows mould, or fungus, growing at the base of these rocks. Although the base of rocks on Mars could be naturally green, it seems a growth of mould of some type is more likely, since it seems unlikely that only the base of the rocks would show green (the photos are available to see on the Internet at <http://www.filersfiles.com/space/index/>)

Dr. Carol Stoker, from NASA's Ames Research Center, worked with a team that used photos from the 1997 Mars Pathfinder mission to determine if there could be chlorophyll on Mars. The soil near the landing site suggests there could be chlorophyll, the molecule used by plants and other organisms on Earth to extract energy from sunlight. Researchers stress their work is in a very preliminary stage and they are far from making definite claims. The findings will come under intense scrutiny when it is presented to an astrobiology conference in the US next week. Dr. Carol Stoker confirmed the findings to BBC News Online, but cautioned that they were not ready for "the big time". The Mars Pathfinder mission touched down in the Ares Vallis region of Mars in July 1997, and numerous images of the surrounding area were examined by a small rover that moved around to sample rocks. Knowing the spectral signature of chlorophyll, the researchers wrote a computer program that systematically scanned for the spectral signature associated with red light absorption by chlorophyll. Previous searches for evidence of chlorophyll in Pathfinder's pictures were carried out and tentative indications were seen but they were dismissed as "possible image MIS-registration". In Dr. Stoker's study six regions were positive for the chlorophyll signature near the camera where it has the highest sensitivity and resolution. Two regions showed a chlorophyll signature in the soil around Pathfinder. Mars has been observed by astronomers to turn green each spring for centuries, does it seem logical that something green is growing?

MARS

The amazing detail shown on this sketch was recorded at Mill Hill, London, on 29 April 1967, 22.30 UT, by R.A. Wells using an 18-inch o.g. x375.

The dark feature on the left limb is Syrtis Major. The white patch above it is a cloud or possible surface frost over Hellas. Ending in a fork, across the centre top, runs Sabaeus Sinus. At the bottom right is Mare Acidalium, split by the prominent Achilles Pons. Resolved into streaks, the broad Protonilius/Deuteromilus canal diagonally crosses the centre. Within it are three oasis groups. The very bottom canal is Calirrhoe. The remaining canals appeared as delicate thin streaks noticed only at moments of best seeing. All features correspond to previous mapping of the planet.

Astaboras is the canal crossing the disk from Syrtis Major to M. Acidaleum. Generally it is seen only to the central oasis called Immenius Lacus. The remaining portion, named Astaboras II, was first recorded by Lowell and has since that time been extremely difficult to detect.

Its fugitive nature may be attributed to shifting dust from the neighbouring desert of Cydonia, says

Introduction from Earth Men, Space Men, by Tony Wedd, Part 3:

Alongside a copy of Alfred Watkins' book The Old Straight Track comes another book Flying Saucers and the Straight-Line Mystery, by Aimé Michel, tracing the patterns of sightings during part of 1954 when there was a major "flap" in France. The link is obvious. Having made the connection, one is prepared to see with better understanding what Buck Nelson means in his book when he quotes the Space People as saying that "where the magnetic currents cross is comparable to a cross-roads sign. These currents or lines of force are named and numbered."

As a fascinating contrast, and another thrust at those dogmatists of science, comes a live exhibit: a hive of bees with a glass observation panel, and outlet to the open air. It is one of the anomalies of Darwin's Theory of Evolution that no close ancestors exist upon the Earth, or seem ever to have there existed, for the common honey bee. Legend has it that bees were originally a gift from Venus: this could be true indeed. For obviously the Theory of Evolution can no longer be applied to Earth in isolation; if only because a stream of particles is showering upon the Earth from Space; some showing evidence of organic origins. The possibility exists that some forms of life have been imported here; and man cannot be seen unequivocally to be a native of the Earth.

Intermittently around the hall, the visitor has been aware of hundreds of little photographs of UFOs. They come from all around the world, little objects from here and there that some lucky man has captured with his camera: they hang as little discs upon a thread, the reverse side carrying the portrait of the photographer. Are all these people wrong? The portrait gallery is concentrated at length upon a three-score company of men and women; those who have seen the objects upon the ground and spoken to their crews. For what could be more natural, if the UFOs are real, and can be photographed, than that some should come down for a landing, and see what people on the Earth are like? Isn't that just what we should do ourselves?

Working back towards the entrance, the visitor now hears some of the recordings made by Philip Rodgers, by way of a microphone upon his window cill. During the recording, nothing audible is heard; but in the play-back appear fragments of strange music, unknown languages, odd noises and greetings in the English tongue. Sometimes these messages seem to indicate translation, such as "Hallelujah - Nyannapodo" and "Sputnik - Anyapardoo". Mr. Rodgers thinks the language is called Solexmar. There are some actual references to Space, but it must be obvious that only someone out in space, with unknown apparatus, is beaming power upon the microphone. In addition, they are able to show remarkable powers of telepathy, and instantaneous awareness of what is going on in human minds.

There happens to be another Englishman who claims to sing in Solexmar; and this is more remarkable because occasionally the language seems the same as that recorded by Philip Rodgers. This strange gift is genuinely exercised, and he may be right in saying what the songs are about. For instance, in a song about travelling in Space, he starts "Muz' Anya", and the word "Anya" is several times repeated later. Is "Anya" the generic term for Space Ship, and "Anya Pardoo" a more specific term, for instance an unmanned ship? The word "Meeseemar" occurs, and this too Philip has recorded, sounding like a greeting.

So when the visitor finally takes his leave, he will certainly have quite a lot to think about: new neighbours, who may reasonably object to our releasing atom bombs in Space; new science, heralding free energy and the gradual release from the brutalising power of money; a freer range of travel, costing nothing but an act of friendliness; and the first clues that there may be a language common to our visitors from Space. Such an exhibition will induce many others to come forward with stories that they had not dared to tell before. Philip Human, for example, has found himself speaking occasionally in an unknown tongue: perhaps it will be possible to catch him in the act and make a record. Strange steps to new enlightenment! But every step along the way will be necessarily strange: the fact that evidence is offered which is not what we would expect may be a powerful proof of its authenticity.

Close encounters of the royal kind

This was the title of an interesting article in the Daily Mail on April 25th on the interest of certain members of the Royal Family in UFOs, particularly Prince Philip, who reads Flying Saucer Review, and who an equerry, Sir Peter Horsley, confirmed "was open to the immense possibilities of new technology leading to space exploration, while at the same time not discounting that, just as we were on the fringe of breaking into space, so other older civilisations in the Universe might already have done so". Sir Peter was given permission by the Duke to investigate cases "as long as he did not involve his office in any kind of publicity", and witnesses were even invited to the Palace, including James Howard (captain of an airliner whose passengers and crew saw a UFO formation over the Atlantic) and Stephen Darbishire (who photographed a flying saucer over the Lake District, that was similar to Adamski's scoutships).

The other Royal with a UFO interest was Lord Mountbatten, who is reported to have said "These extraordinary things have been seen in almost every part of the world...it seems clear that the overwhelming weight of opinion will show that some new thing exists which is capable of flying very slow or hovering and accelerating at an unheard-of speed. The available evidence will show that they are not of human agency, that is, they do not come from the Earth...maybe it is the Shackletons and Scotts of Venus or Mars who are making the first observation of our Earth." He also suggested the saucers might be the alien life-forms themselves.

There were also two interesting contact cases mentioned - one being at Lord Mountbatten's home at Broadlands, in which an employee called Briggs claimed to have seen a saucer land, a tube descend and a man emerge. He was then overwhelmed by an "unseen force" which caused him to stumble, and the saucer took off again. Later he claimed it returned and Briggs was invited aboard; he was taken to see the Pyramids in Egypt in ten minutes, was then returned and told "If Lord Mountbatten met us he could change the world". Mountbatten was apparently very interested and was taken to visit the site, though no evidence for the visit could be found.

The other seemingly came about from a contact of Sir Peter Horsley mentioned above; he was invited to a flat in Chelsea one night in 1955 and had a long conversation with a "Mr. Janus" who, similarly to the Broadlands contactor, said he would like to meet the Duke of Edinburgh. They discussed various topics and though Janus never claimed to be from another planet he gave the impression he was visiting Earth as an observer, and that he was reading Horsley's thoughts. Later when the flat was visited again it was found empty and the original contact became "distant and evasive". These accounts were extracted from Out of the Shadows, by David Clarke and Andy Roberts, published by Piatkus Books.

UFO-Experience on the island Rügen / Germany

by Martin Buschmann of IGAP-Deutschland

This trip had been prepared many months ago. On May 11/12 2002 the contactee "Martin Wiesengrün" and I arranged a meeting on Germany's largest island, Rügen in the Baltic Sea. "Martin Wiesengrün" is a pseudonym for a contactee in the mid-fifties who grew up in this area. In 1957, he was contacted by the crew of a space ship which landed near his home. He was invited to come aboard the "Flying Saucer". A few days later, he was sent back to Earth. As other well known contactees (George Adamski, Howard Menger, Daniel Fry, etc.) he described the visitors from space as absolutely human in appearance with wise ethics and marvellous advanced techniques and science. Living in the GDR (Deutsche Demokratische Republik - DDR), the east/socialistic part of Germany, he often struggled to understand what happened. In this kind of state, this kind of experience cannot happen..... In 1999, the contactee was looking for a serious person who will understand his problem and he found us, the IGAP-Deutschland, a well-known UFO society in Germany. In 2000, he published a book Mein UFO-Erlebnis auf Rügen (My UFO Contact on Rügen), in the German language, about his contactee experience.

A few days before, the Hotel was booked, we were now ready to start..... My Hotel (Kurhotel Sassnitz) was in the middle of Sassnitz and very comfortable. Sassnitz is a very nice place to stay, but only for a few days. For a full holiday, it is too small. I arrived one day before the meeting, so I would have enough time to do some sightseeing. Binz, Sassnitz and Bergen are nice places to see. Along with some museums, I went to Prora, an unfinished seaside resort built by the NS organisation "Kraft durch Freude - KdF" 1937-1939. It would have been the largest ocean resort in the world after completion (ca. 10 km long). After the war, it was a military base in the GDR by the "Nationale Volksarmee NVA". Today, the area is open to the public. On 11.05. at 3 p.m. I got a call from my friend "Martin Wiesengrün" that he had arrived at his Hotel in Lohme. After a friendly welcome, we went to the place where his father's house was placed decades ago. After that, we went by foot to the Contact area. This was very emotional for "Martin W.". Back to his Hotel, we had a few hours of interesting conversation. In the evening, I drove back to Sassnitz to my hotel.

Next day at 10 am we met with a TV team from the German TV channel NDR. The TV director, Mr. Fugmann, asked to make a report about the contactee experience of "Martin Wiesengrün". Also with us was Dipl.-Ing. Klaus Deistung, an active member of our German IGAP-group. We discussed what place should be visited first. We decided on the "Contact area" for the TV interviews. The way was via heavy bumpy farmland and we nearly ruined our cars (I was really glad to have a Citroen with adjustable chassis!!) Arriving, we were given little microphones for the report.... Next there were interviews in front of the hotel where "Martin Wiesengrün" was staying. The whole thing took 3 ½ hours....The NDR-TV made a very good report at the NDR-Magazin DAS 16.05.2002.

THE HIDDEN UNITY and BEGINNINGS

The Hidden Unity looks at the strange phenomenon of subconscious siting of ley points, and notes that places of worship, of all religions and all ages, tend to predominate on leys. The environmental and philosophical implications of this are discussed, and the apparent necessity of worship but irrelevance of doctrine. Two ley centres are given as examples, and investigated in depth - the Shah Jehan Mosque in Woking and the Guru Nanak Sikh Temple, Scunthorpe. There is an appendix by Eileen Grimshaw on the significance of the Pagan religion to this study. Illustrated with photographs, maps and line drawings. £2 plus 30p p&p from the Amskaya address. Please make cheques payable to J. Goddard.

Beginnings is about a series of potentially useful discoveries, mainly made by Jimmy Goddard over a period of about twenty years, but having some overlap with discoveries made by others. For various reasons, the investigations are all in their early stages, and some have not been continued. They include earth energy detection, natural antigravity, subconscious siting, ley width, and the solar transition effect. There is also a chapter on cognitive dissonance - a psychological factor which seems to have been at the root of all bigotry - scientific, religious and other - down the ages. The booklet is concluded with an account of the discovery of leys by Alfred Watkins. £2 plus 30p p&p from the Amskaya address. Please make cheques payable to J. Goddard.

EARTH PEOPLE, SPACE PEOPLE

In 1961, Tony Wedd produced a manuscript Earth Men, Space Men, detailing many claims of extraterrestrial contact. It was never published, and I had thought it was lost, though it has recently been located. To try to make up for the loss in a much more modest size, this booklet was prepared. As well as giving details of some of the more prominent contact claims, there are articles on the history of the STAR Fellowship and some of its personalities, evidence for life in the Solar System and investigation into extraterrestrial language.

£2 plus 30p p&p from the Amskaya address. Please make cheques payable to J. Goddard.

THE LEGACY OF TONY WEDD

This CD-ROM is an electronic form of the travelling exhibition Tony planned, using his voice, writing, photographs and drawings to illustrate his research and findings in the fields of flying saucers, landscape energies and lost technology.

£9.99 from the Amskaya address. Please make cheques payable to J. Goddard.

AMSKAYA is the newsletter of the STAR Fellowship, a continuation of the organisation formed in 1960 by Tony Wedd of Chiddingstone, who held that contact was the way ahead for flying saucer investigation. £2 for four quarterly issues from J. Goddard, 25, Albert Road, Addlestone, Weybridge, Surrey, KT15. 2PX. Please make cheques payable to J. Goddard. IF YOUR SUBSCRIPTION IS DUE AN "X" WILL FOLLOW THIS SENTENCE:
